Prof. dr. François Vaillancourt: Comparing Canada and USA macro policies during the 2008 economic shock.

François Vaillancourt has been a professor in the Department of Economics at the Université de Montréal since 1976. He is an expert on public policy issues, and has served as Research Co-ordinator for the MacDonald Commission (1983-1986), Assistant Director of Canadian Public Policy-Analyse de Politiques magazine (1986-1995), Guest Researcher at the University of Toronto and the Australian National University and Affiliated Researcher with the IRPP (1992-2000) and the CD Howe Institute (2000-2003).

His fields of research are language policies and intergovernmental financial relations in Canada and around the world (New Zealand and Europe; twelve countries from Bhutan to Tunisia, including the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Morocco and Pakistan). In public economics, he is interested in federalism (distribution of powers, funding mechanisms) and taxation (costs of collection, harmonization, local taxation, state-owned corporations). In language economics, he deals with income gaps and the impact of language policies, while in human resources, he is interested in social policies from a federal point of view and in the return on investment of education.

The theme of the lecture: Comparing Canada and USA macro policies during the 2008 economic shock.
